Recommendations on a good curl holding product

Hey ladies! I'm transitioning and did my first protective style two nights ago (two strand twist roller set out). It came out really nice but by the end of the day my curls looked more like a wiry mess. I realized halfway through sitting under the dry that I forgot to use a holding agent/setting lotion. After all that work I wasn't able to start over again so I just prayed it come out nice. Well it did but only lasted about 8 hours lol. Can anyone recommend a good holding agent that will define, hold and not frizz out the curls of my partially natural mostly relaxed hair? I have about 3 inches of new growth.

Thanks!

Have you tried flax seed gel? Or a nice aloe gel? Although I'm not in transition, I find that both of these hold my curls nicely for a few days...

I have gel but I was putting it just on my roots in the front to lay them down. I never thought to put it in before setting. I'll try that. Thanks.

Jane Carter Solution Wrap & Roll setting lotion - I tried many different things and it had the best, most natural and longest hold. My rod set would last until a washed my hair.

Qhemet Honeybush Tea Soft Gel is a great product to hold curls. However, I've only used it to two strand twist my hair while it's damp and I let it air dry or dry over night.

Aloe vera gel, IC gel, and Qhemet's Honeybush are all worth a try. I think starting with wet (not just damp) hair is also key. Congratulations and good luck on your journey!
