Review:

You may remember me mentioning this shampoo in this post awhile back. I finally was able to use it when washing out my twistout. I thought it'd be a good test for it since I hadn't washed my hair in three weeks and I also had a small amount of buildup in my crown area. Naturally, I wouldn't use a gentle shampoo if I had some heavy buildup and needed clarifying.

The texture is very much like regular shampoos. It almost reminds me of cream of nature detangling shampoo in consistency. It doesn't lather as much as I thought it would, but it suds up just a tad. The smell is heavenly and kind of reminds me of Nourish and Shine (one of my fav butters), though not as strong. I cleaned my scalp with it and it gives you that tingly feeling, I'm assuming from peppermint oil.

I never tried their other shampoo, but this one is pretty nice!

Hydrating? Not really, but my hair wasn't stripped.

Invigorating? Absolutely!

As I mentioned in the other article, I was sent a sample of this to try out, but I don't think it's available in stores or online for purchase yet. I'll edit this post with cost and ingredient info when it's available. I would think that ingredients would be pretty high grade though.

Edit: 11/19/09 I updated the ingredient list, it's now available for purchase.
